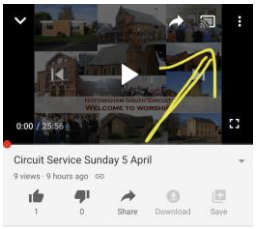
Could I watch a YouTube video on my TV?

Go to the video you want to watch.

On the screen of your device (smartphone/ tablet /computer) look to see if the screen icon appears

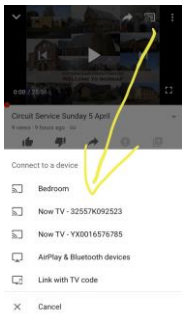
It looks like this



On a touchscreen device you may need to tap the screen to make it appear.

If using a computer the icon may appear in the line below the video.

If you tap/click on it then it may bring up a list of connected devices.



If you can see the brand name of your TV set or set top box in the list then click on it to connect with that device. The video should appear on the screen and should play automatically.

If this doesn't work, you could try looking to see if your TV or set top box has a YouTube app.

You may also need to make sure your TV or set top box has been connected to your wifi router.

SKY Q Customers – Using the instructions above you should be able to "cast" to your box.

(Sky+HD subscribers don't have YouTube)

Virgin - Channel 198 is YouTube on some Virgin TV boxes Try searching for "Nottingham South Circuit"

Freesat+ (only those with Freetime) The YouTube app is on the "On Demand" menu

Freeview Play boxes and TVs may have the YouTube app.

Smart TVs -Various brands of smart TV have access to the YouTube app.

NOW TV, Amazon Fire Stick and Chromecast can all be used and should appear in the list of connected devices.
